MANUFACTURING PROCESS
Solidwood and Tradition

At Indocasa Furniture, we aim to merge the experience and knowledge of our European Management together with the outstanding skills of Jepara carpenters.
As widely known, Jepara in Central Java has been for decades the centre for handicrafts and furniture manufacturing, thanks to the greatest carpentry skills, which were transmitted for various generations.
Today, Indocasa Furniture, is bringing a spark of European design and production techniques into this environment where we constantly work side by side with local carpenters in order to achieve high quality products at the most affordable prices in the market.
Starting from the selection of the raw materials, the designing, which is done with latest version of AutoCAD, until the finishing and packing, everything is taken care of following the most demanding standards.
Throughout the years Our QC team has developed a strong sense of responsibility towards the customer's satisfaction, thanks to the teaching and learning process, which is a key part of our daily procedure.

Wood is Alive

IMPORTANT INFORMATION OF SOLID WOOD

Wood is alive! It is thus important that wood, including solid wood, is treated correctly. If taken care of adequately and constantly, solid wood lasts much more time than ever thought! Wood is often subjected to movements as a consequence of the humidity and the temperature of the environment in which it is located. In our daily life, it is possible that optimal conditions for wood to live in are not fulfilled, and it is thus normal for wood to increase or decrease its own dimensions according to the climate. Variations of 0,5 - 1,0% on solid wood table tops or surfaces are normal and cannot represent a reason for claims.

A very important element that should be considered when dealing with solid wood furniture is humidity.

For a good holding of solid wood, it is recommended that the humidity of the room is around 50 - 55 % - it is possible to achieve such result by using proper humidifiers and air purifiers. Each and every wooden piece of furniture features unique colour shades and grains.

Pieces of furniture finished with oil and wax can feature slightly darker or lighter shades and such nuances cannot be avoided since they are typical features of natural wood. Wood also reacts to different light conditions.

Normally, light-shade woods tend to turn darker, whereas dark-shade woods tend to turn lighter. It is suggested, so to avoid colour differences over the top of one single element, not to leave the same item over a surface for a long period of time.

Our goal is to create furniture that can challenge time and fashion while keeping work ethics and respect for nature as a primary focus.
